

Interested in Obtaining Valid Status in the U.S.?

Current U.S. immigration law does not generally provide U.S. visas or other immigration-related benefits to individuals who are currently in the U.S. and have been out of status (without a valid visa) for more than one year. If this is your situation, we recommend the following options:

1. VISANOW eConsultation: Consult our experienced immigration attorneys online

Even though you have been in the U.S. without a current visa, you may be still be eligible for relief or entitled to legal status in the U.S. for various reasons such as:

- You have family members with U.S. citizenship, or
- You are political asylee or refugee.

If you believe that you may still be entitled to benefits and would like an experienced immigration attorney to assess your case, VISANOW's eConsultation is a fast, convenient and inexpensive way to get legal immigration advice. For only $39.95, our attorneys will assess your visa eligibility within 24 hours. If you are eligible for a visa and apply through VISANOW, the eConsultation fee will be applied to the visa application fees. If you are not eligible, we will refund your eConsultation fee.

2. Consult a local attorney

If you prefer to discuss your circumstances face-to-face, you may wish to seek out and consult with an immigration attorney in your area. We recommend that you confirm what consultation and/or other fees apply before getting advice.

3. Follow new legislation and sign up for VISANOW's monthly Immigration Reform email newsletter

U.S. Immigration law changes frequently, and those changes may impact your ability to obtain future immigration benefits. Currently, Congress is entering into debates to overhaul U.S. Immigration law - commonly referred to as Comprehensive Immigration Reform. VISANOW is a longstanding supporter of efforts to reform U.S. Immigration law and obtains, organizes, and analyzes the most up-to-date information regarding the progress of Immigration Reform. We recommend that you stay current in these issues and how they affect you by signing up for our FREE monthly newsletter.
